WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

A weak front is poised just offshore, ready to make its way into our forecast area later this morning and this afternoon. The upper level ridge currently in control over southern Oregon and Northern California will effectively shut the system down as it moves onshore, and compared to previous events, very little impacts are expected. Precipitation will be light.

Eureka Weather:

High pressure over the area will maintain dry weather conditions through tonight. A weakening front will bring a chance of light rain on Sunday. Dry and warmer weather conditions will return early next week.

Reno Weather:

High pressure will strengthen over the Sierra and Western Nevada this week, bringing dry conditions through the work week. Above average temperatures through Monday will ease down to near average for the lower valleys Tuesday, then jump to 8 to 14 degrees above average on Wednesday. The next chance for precipitation will be next weekend.

Sacramento Weather:

Dry weather expected through the week with above normal temperatures and some patchy morning valley fog.

San Francisco Weather:

Dry and unseasonably warm weather conditions will persist over the region through much of the upcoming week as high pressure builds along the West Coast. Chances for precipitation and a slight cooling trend may return late in the week and into next weekend as a storm system approaches the region.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

Dry weather will continue for the next several days as a ridge of high pressure dominates the pattern. Except for areas of night and morning low clouds and fog in the San Joaquin valley skies will be mostly clear through Thursday. A warming trend is expected through midweek with high temperatures averaging well above normal by Tuesday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

The warming trend will continue through Monday as offshore flow combines with building high pressure aloft. An approaching low pressure system will allow onshore flow and a cooling trend to develop by the weekend.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

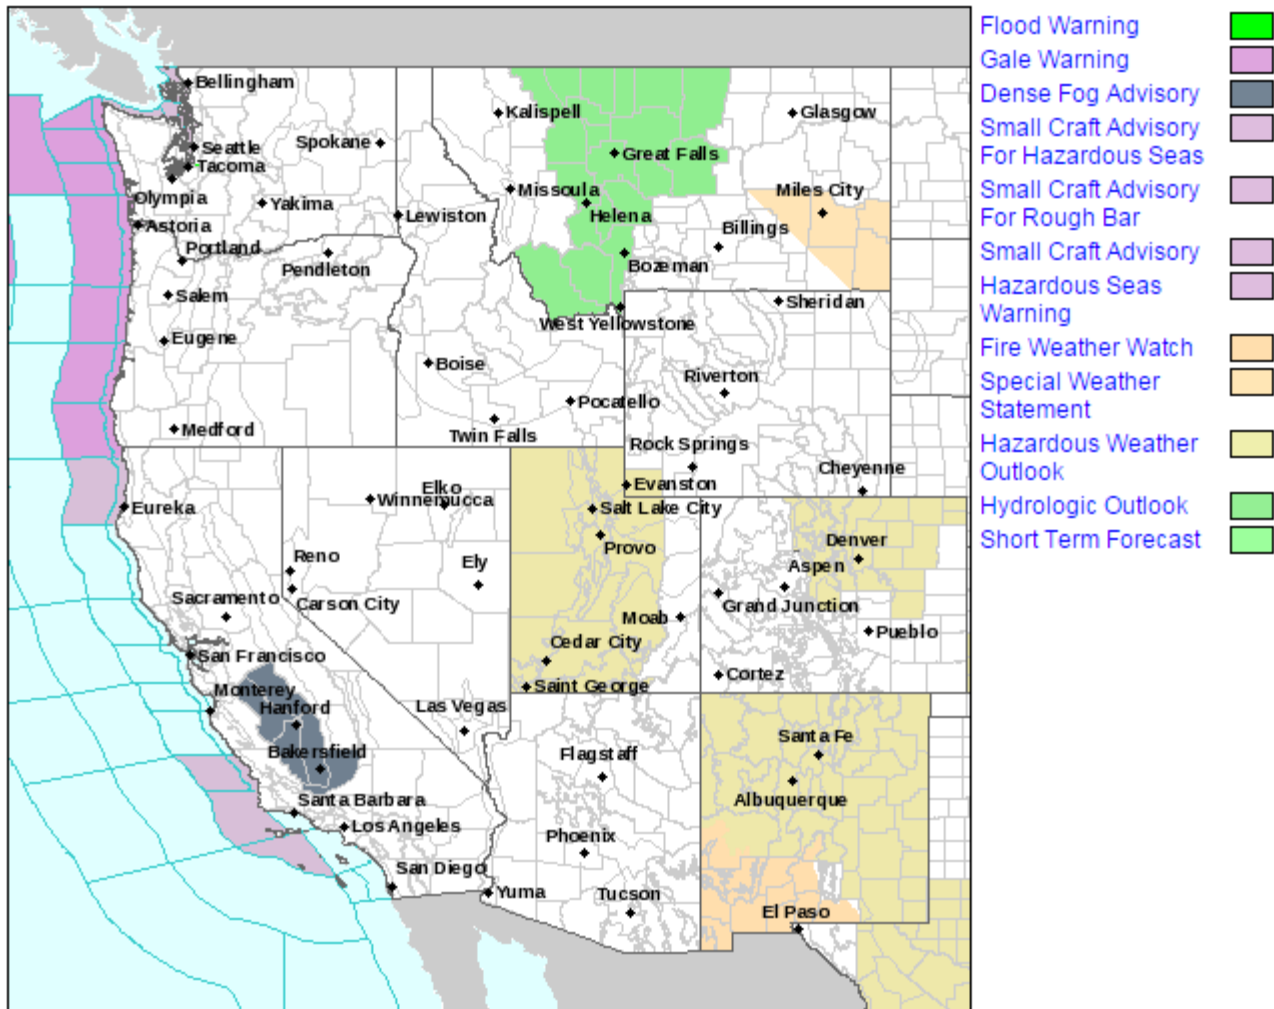

High pressure will continue the inland warming trend today. High pressure aloft near the West Coast will bring well above average high temperatures for Monday through Friday with gusty Northeast winds near the coastal foothills on Monday. Cooling will follow for next weekend as a weakening low pressure system moves inland through California.

Southeast California Weather:

Another unseasonably strong high pressure system is forecast to build over the region through Monday resulting in sunny skies with record or near record temperatures.
